Description

The fourth day leads first along the Muhs-Panoramaweg to the Muhspyramide. This place of strength convinces with probably the most beautiful view towards the Großvenediger and the surrounding glacier massif. The descent to the Lasnitzental valley is also very moderate until you reach a small plateau. Here you can either descend to the right to the Lasnizenhütte or continue directly to the left in the direction of the Michtalscharte. The 2,652m-high crossing and the subsequent Rote Lenke (2,793m) are the most demanding key sections of this stage. After just under 6 hours of walking, you reach the Neue Reichenberger Hütte. The picturesque Bödensee lake glistens in the setting evening sun and invites you to cool off. But be careful: the lake only has a few degrees even in the summer months!
